Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 02 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Rain and cloud spreading east overnight. Brief snow possible.

This Evening and Tonight:
Starting dry, but cloud increasing through the evening, with brisk winds and outbreaks of rain spreading east overnight. This likely falling as snow at first for some, mainly across higher ground, but soon turning to rain at all levels. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Friday:
Outbreaks of rain and drizzle soon clearing to leave a largely dry day. Cloudy at first, with hill fog, but some sunny spells developing by the afternoon. Feeling less cold. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Chilly weekend with sunny spells and showers, wintry over hills. Occasionally windy, perhaps coastal gales overnight Saturday into Sunday. Rain and snow spreading east Monday morning, clearing to sunny spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.